WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 22, 1744.

Yesterday arriv'd a Mail from Holland.

Constantinople, January 7.

HE Silence observed by the Port on the Subject of the Affairs of Persia, since the raising of the Siege of Mosul, occasioned a Suspicion that Things did not go altogether so well as had been reported. We have been since informed, that this Conjecture is but too well grounded; and that, instead of the Shah Nadir's abandoning his Conquests, and marching into Persia, as was given out here, he has actually besieged Babylon in Form, and has, for several Months, kept it quite blocked up. This ill News is attended with the following Circumstances. The Forces that had been repulsed at Mosul having joined his Army at Kerkut, he marched immediately with all his Forces to the Camp before Babylon; where he found his Army, with the Forces he brought with him, about 150,000 strong; with which Body he determined to push the Siege with all imaginable Vigour. He then marched with 30,000 light armed Troops to visit the Tomb of the Prophet Ali, which is but two Days Journey from Babylon; whence it was conjectured, that he intended to move on towards Mecca; but of a sudden he altered his March, and with that Corps of Troops possessed himself of the strong Pass of Sigirla; the only One, by which it is possible for the Turkish Troops to attempt the Relief of Babylon. He has, besides, 40 or 50,000 Men at Kerkut and Ervel, where he has provided large Magazines, and furnished them abundantly. The Porte was in hopes, that the proclaiming Shah Rade, descended from the old Race of Persian Princes, would have had a good Effect, and have drawn Numbers of People in the frontier Provinces to revolt; but we have been deceived in our Notions, Shah Nadir is more firmly seated on the Throne than ever; and we are now not a little fearful that his Nephew, who is coming with a great Reinforcement out of Persia, will seize the Person of the pretended Shah we have set up. This Moment we have received Advice, that Babylon is not only blocked up, but reduced to the very last degree of Extremity. If it should fall into the Hands of the Persians, we shall then have no other Places of Consequence in that Part of the World, except the Fortress of Mosul and the City of Bastra, both of which are at present blocked up by the Troops of the Shah. The Seraskier of Diarbeckir, who had Orders to march to the Relief of Mosul, found that impracticable, on account of the superior Forces that he found blocked up his Passage. Such is the present Situation of Things; perhaps we shall speedily receive the News of this City's having surrender'd, which must be attended with very fatal Consequences here, where the Minds of the People are in a manner ripe for Rebellion.

Petersburgh, February 7. Her Imperial Majesty has appointed Count Nariskin to receive the Princess of Anhalt Zerbst, and her Daughter, on the Frontiers, in order to conduct them to Moscow, where the young Princess will espouse the Grand Duke of Russia. This Scheme is thought not very agreeable to the Project of the Marquis de la Chetardie, tho' very acceptable to the Nobility of this Empire. It is very evident, that our Court is disposed to live in the utmost Harmony with all its Neighbours. The Disputes about our Frontiers, with the Republick of Poland, are entirely settled; the Election of a Duke of Courland will be over some Time next Month. There is not the least Reason to apprehend any Disturbances on the Side of Turky; and the Conclusion of a Peace between Sweden and Denmark, has established the Tranquillity of the North, so that we speedily expect to see a Reduction of our Forces. We apprehend here, that the new English Minister, Lord Tyrawley, will be charged with some Commission of Importance, because the Senate insisted on hearing his Propositions, before they took those of the Marquis de la Chetardie into Consideration.

Stockholm, February 11. The King, who has been very ill of a Fit of the Gravel, is at present recovered, and in perfect Health. On the 6th his Majesty went to Upsal, where he did not continue long; but after diverting himself with a Day or two's Hunting, returned hither. It is certain, that Count Tessin has Orders to go immediately from Copenhagen to Berlin, in order to demand the Princess Louisa Ulrica, his Prussian Majesty's Sister, for his Royal Swedish Highness. It is believed, that we shall speedily see an Imperial Minister here, in order to treat with the King about the augmenting the Hessian Forces, at present in the Service of the Emperor; and we the rather believe this, because his Majesty, since his Illness, talks no more of going to visit his German Dominions.

Copenhagen, February 15. Orders have been given for finishing, without delay, the several Men of War that are on the Stocks; which, with the Motion of some Troops on the Side of Holstein, occasions no small Speculation, inasmuch as it does not seem to correspond at all with the Report which hath so long prevailed of Peace; since the Expences his Majesty has been at in his Military Preparations, have already cost the Nation a prodigious Sum of Money.

Madrid, February 3. The Count de Montijo is gone to his Country Seat for three Weeks; but the Day after his Departure, his Majesty was pleased to say, that tho' he granted him his Permission, yet he should have been better satisfied if he had not made use of it. The Day after To-morrow, however, he is expected back. A very unlucky Affair happened here last Week, which has made a great deal of Noise, and is like to make a good deal more. A Sergeant, with a Party of Eight Invalids under his Command, were carrying to Prison a Couple of Deserters; and, in their Way, pass'd by the French Ambassador's Door; upon which one of the Footmen immediately called out to him, Hearkye, Rascal, don't you know that this Palace belongs to an Ambassador, and that you have no Right to carry any Prisoner this Way. The Sergeant was for moving on without making a Word of Answer, but his Excellency's Footmen came running out, and would needs set the Deserters at Liberty The Sergeant disputed the Matter very gravely; but finding he had a Dozen or Fourteen upon his Hands, and that there were already several Swords drawn, he ordered one of his Soldiers to Fire, who unluckily killed one of his Excellency's Postillions. He then carried the Deserters to Prison, and went next with the Soldier, who kill'd the Man, and took Sanctuary in a Church; from whence they were dragg'd the next Day, upon the Complaint of the French Minister, by Order of the Court. The poor Sergeant, is sentenced to be hang'd, and the Soldier to suffer five Years imprisonment, after assisting at the Execution. The Bishop of Rennes, however, has desired the Sergeant's Execution may be respited, till the Return of a Courier from his Court. On the other Hand, the Council of War have presented a Memorial to the King, setting forth, that the Soldier is absolutely innocent, since he did no more than what was his Duty; and that as to the Sergeant, that he had only preferred Discipline to Decorum, which was a Mistake; that, in their humble Opinion, ought not to bring him within the Circle of a Halter; especially in the midst of a War, which, without Discipline, it was impossible for his Majesty to support.

Milan, February 10. The Count de Gages has lately played off a Stratagem, which will gain him a great deal of Reputation, tho' it has done him no Good. After sending away his Baggage, with his Sick and Wounded, he made such Dispositions, as manifested a Design of retiring a little of the fastest; in hopes that Prince Lobkowitz would have sent a great Body of Troops towards Pesaro, in order to have fallen upon their Rear; in which Case he had made ample Provision for their Reception. But Prince Lobkowitz knew him too well, to believe he would make a precipitate Retreat; and sent, therefore, some of his Spies, to examine the adjacent Posts, where they found several Battalions of Spanish Foot, lying flat on their Faces, behind the Hedges. The next Morning Count de Gages, finding his Scheme did not succeed, returned into his former Quarters, satisfied with having done his best, tho' his Project did not succeed.

Ancona, February 11. One of the English Men of War, on the Fifth, forced a Passage into our Port, in spite of all the Precautions taken to prevent it. The Officers immediately came ashore, and as they passed thro' the Streets the People gathered about them, with loud Acclamations of, Long live the Queen of Hungary, and all her Friends. The Magistrates interposed, in order to quiet this Tumult; the rather, because the Count de Gages had ordered several Detachments to advance into our Neighbourhood, as if he intended to make himself Master of the Citadel. Since this Accident, M. Manfroni, General of his Holiness's Troops, is come hither, in order to take such Measures as shall be necessary for the Security and Preservation of the Place.

Vienna, February 15. On the 12th of this Month the Duke of Aremberg set out for the Netherlands, from whence he is to go to the Court of London. Her Majesty was pleased to tell him at parting, that she put all her Concerns in the Low Countries, and with her Allies, into his Hands; knowing by Experience, from the Zeal he had expressed in her Service, and his sincere Attachment to her Family, that they could not be any where safer. All our Military Affairs are perfectly settled. Field-Marshal Count Traun will command on the Rhine instead of Count Khevenhuller; his Army will consist of about 48,000 Men at present; that of Prince Charles of Lorrain, which is to serve in Flanders, will consist of 66,000 Men; Count Wallis's Army in Bohemia will be made up of 30,000 Regular Troops, 12 thous. Militia, and 10,000 Hanack's, in all 70,000 Men. Prince Charles, and his Consort the Arch-Duchess, will be accompanied by the Queen as far as Goldendorf, and by the Grand Duke as far as Prague, perhaps as far as Dresden. Count Rossenberg sets out in a few Days for Berlin.

General Post-Office, London, February 8, 1743.
